

Induction - 08

Commitment, hard work, meeting the dead lines, managing oneself & the resources, this is what a Corporate world is all about. The Induction Program at SIMER for the batch (08-10) aimed at inculcating this only in the students. It was a unique blend of academics, management games, spirituality, and self-exploration.

The experience was the first ever in life. We could have never imagined that we can undergo such rigorous program - 64 hours of classroom session combined with numerous assignments and presentations. Not to forget the group tasks that made us realize the team spirit and group dynamics.

After the keynote address of Mr. Lokesh Verma (CEO, SIMER), on day one, we developed a thirst for words of wisdom and knowledge, which was quenched by the presence of successful people from industry like Mr. Indra Narayan Das (Nokia India Ltd) who talked on how to make these 2years more valuable, Mr. Khiro Mahapatra (Big Bazaar) who talked about what the industry wants from MBA's, Mr. Dinesh Jotwani (IMS Learning) introduced us to the case study method.

Mr. Ajay P. Verma (E.D. SIMER) made us realize that we are the future of the nation. He also stressed on the expectations our parents have from us.

All the faculty members of SIMER updated us on the current trends of the industry and various subjects. They gave deep insight into basic & important factors

The five-day program helped us learn new concepts like Lateral Thinking, Emotional Intelligence, and Time Management and provided an impetus to gel with each other. We really loved the management games and group tasks assigned to us from time to time in the program. At the approaching end we all could feel what a manager has to be in the coming times and celebrated Induction with a pie of cake and DJ party.
